

My concern would not be with the broadcast flag itself (they have a right to protect thier IP). My concern would be that consumers would have no recourse should the Flag be "defaulted" to "no anything" by a station or network that was not paying attention to setup. They happens WAY more than you would think. Example would be a Public service announcement with the flag set (well for the most part anyway). Thanks for reading...